Dear Mission College:

As part of my presidential goals and as the next step in our institutional planning, I am holding several Visioning Forums in the month of February 2011. These forums have the intended outcome of supplying me, our branding consultants, and the GAP with much needed feedback on how we want to meet our future and what visuals, wording and themes we want to communicate to students, the community and to our internal community as well. These opportunities will be one hour in length and will have four or five focused questions for participants to answer and discuss. In addition, we will have the two Mission College branding logos for college community feedback and review. Many college constituents have noted that they hope we can take a look at the logos one more time for expanded feedback and that will be provided in our visioning sessions as well.

As we move forward with our two year goals, and our participation in district strategic planning, I want to have all of your input on how we then meet the 21st century. Please try to attend one of the forums and I am asking that managers please work with staff to give classified employees a chance to participate as well. This is a college effort and your thoughts are welcomed and needed.

Attached to this email are the dates and time for forums; a small summary of what visioning means; and, a summary of my demonstrated outcomes for this process.

I know this is right before the holidays, but I did want you to have a moment to schedule one of the forums into your spring calendars.

Take care,

Laurel
